

MOST DARING OF ALL FLIGHTS YET

AVIATOR McCURDY SETS NEW RECORD FOR AEROPLANES.

NEARLY REACHED HAVANA

Fell in Harbor Ten Miles Out But Was Rescued by Vessel—Wonderful Flight.

Key West, Florida, Jan. 30.—In the presence of thousands of people, J. A. D. McCurdy started from Tampa in his biplane for a flight of one hundred and fifteen miles over the Gulf of Mexico to Havana, Cuba, at 7:30 this morning.

McCurdy took the air gracefully and in forty-two minutes had passed the torpedo boat fleet, of the squadron which was stationed along the route. The fleet was twenty miles out in the Gulf.

McCurdy however dropped into the water ten miles outside of Havana harbor, undamaged.

McCurdy had negotiated the flight successfully within ten miles of Havana harbor where his lubricating oil became exhausted and forced him to land in the water. Pontoon attached to his machine kept it afloat and he with the machine, was rescued by the naval destroyer, Paulding.

Fifty ten thousand people cheered McCurdy as he started for Havana. After leaving the ground he circled the starting point at height of five hundred feet, and again at about one thousand feet. Then flying at a speed of about sixty miles he shot out over the waters.

Anxiously the crowd watched the machine until it was out of sight. And then anxiously waited first wireless news. When the dispatch came that he had passed the third boat, thirty miles from shore and was flying singly another cheer was given.

The Paulding, the destroyer nearest the shore of Cuba, was passed at 10:20 and then all boats that had been set to mark the route were reached at full speed for Havana. There were many minutes of painful silence and a great crowd surrounding the cable office became anxious for safety of the aviator.

Then came the message that McCurdy was compelled to come down in the water ten miles from Havana, because lubricating oil had given out. The aviator, however, was safe.

From Havana came the next message that Aviator McCurdy alighted on the water ten miles from the harbor. The Paulding with which aviator was equipped, kept it afloat until the destroyer Paulding came up and took both McCurdy and his machine aboard, and then came into the harbor accompanied by the entire fleet of stake boats. He had covered about eighty miles of the trip.

GOVERNMENT HAS A UNIQUE SITUATION

Destruction of Property When Hounded Anarchist Were Killed Subject of Discussion.

London, Jan. 30.—An extraordinary legal situation has arisen out of the great "Barrington" case, on January 2, when Home Secretary Winston Churchill paraded over 1500 police foot guards, artillery, and firemen, to destroy two foreign desperadoes, who had entrenched themselves at No. 101 Sidney street.

It will be remembered that No. 100 was completely burned out, and the police say that no attempt was made to extinguish the flames until they were certain that the desperadoes were safely burned up. Every house along the street was battered and damaged from the hail of bullets from a machine gun, and the rifles and revolvers of attackers and bewilder.

The damage runs into thousands of dollars, and the owners and tenants naturally say somebody has got to pay. There is touching unanimity on that subject, but there is equal unanimity that no one is legally liable, and consequently none of the parties concerned has any intention of paying anything.

There are no legal grounds for an action against the Crown, because that damage did not arise out of breach of contract, or anything of the sort. No action for trespass, and damage could be maintained against the police or military authorities, because the police and soldiers were only doing their duty, laid down by law in attempting to arrest two suspected felons.

Owners and occupiers have no claim against the local municipal authorities for damage caused by riot and violence, because according to English law, it takes three or more persons to start a "riot" and there were apparently not more than two anarchists in the besieged house.

The insurance companies decline to pay anything in respect of damages deliberately inflicted by other parties, and where the firemen made no attempt to put out a fire until everything was ruined. Equally the fire department cannot be blamed when it was prevented from doing its duty by the civil authorities.

Pressure is now being brought to bear on the Government, to settle the whole bill, by a "grant of grace."

Milwaukee, Jan. 30.—City Aldermen and Socialist Congressmen-elect Victor L. Berger at this afternoon's session of the Milwaukee common council, introduced initiatory measures for the acquisition by the city by purchase or condemnation of the west end of the upper Milwaukee river. A public park is to be made of the picturesque Milwaukee river land, affording an interrupted water frontage of not less than six miles and providing a park for Milwaukee corresponding to the famous Hudson River park of New York City. The cost of the project at this time is estimated at $1,500,000. In a quiet campaign, it is declared, the Socialists have already acquired 60 per cent of the options. The party is determined to carry out the project, according to Alderman Berger this afternoon. Homes for workmen are also proposed on portions of the land.

PLANS TO REDUCE NUMBER OF BILLS

Speaker Ingram, It Is Said, Will Allow No New Measure To Be Introduced After Saturday.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 30.—It was reported at the capitol today that Speaker Ingram is likely to stop if possible the introduction of new bills by individual members by the end of this week. His plan, it is said, is not the one usually followed by a joint resolution, but a method which will be effective and under the direct control of the speaker. If Mr. Ingram does not accomplish this by the end of this week, it is quite likely that next week will certainly be the "dead-line." After such a rule is put in effect, the only way to introduce new bills is through committees. The leaders of the senate so far have no plans along this line, but the upper house probably will follow the example of the assembly.

FIGHTING TO OUST MAYOR OF SEATTLE

Reformers Of Seattle Seeking Recall Of Mayor Hill Through Case In U. S. Circuit Court.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 30.—This city today began the scene of a hard scrambling in connection with the fight that is being waged by the Seattle reformers to bring about the recall of Mayor Frank D. Gill of that city. In the United States Circuit court of appeals the case of Frank D. Gill, Mayor of Seattle, against City Controller W. J. Rathwell of Seattle, to enforce the payment of warrants issued to defray the expenses of the special election called for Feb. 7 to vote on the Mayor's recall, came up for argument. The suit was brought to test the legality of the special election. The outcome of the fight is awaited with keen interest, owing largely to the fact that the contest is the only one of its kind in the history of American municipalities, with the exception of that which resulted in the recall of the mayor of Los Angeles several years ago. Los Angeles was the first city to insert the "recall" provision in its charter and the success with which it was employed there has led to its adoption by many other cities during the past few years.

A consular relief detachment reports twelve persons were drowned and one killed by lightning at Talibay and three persons drowned at Lemery. The government is hurrying relief to the scene.

Twenty other natives lost their lives in the tidal wave which followed the eruption of the Volcano Taal, according to advices received here today. All the towns within a radius of twenty miles have suffered damage from the rain of mud and stones, which still continues. The natives are abandoning the villages and fleeing to the hills in terror.

TO BRING UP THE "MARY ANN" BILL IN LEGISLATURE

Measure Designing Important Election Reform Will Be Discussed in Assembly and Probably in Senate.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 30.—"Mary Ann" will make her appearance in the assembly this week, and perhaps in the senate at the same time. "Mary" is the second choice primary bill, which is designed to carry out the most important election reform pledged in the republican state platform, and which Assemblyman J. W. McConnell of La Crosse will offer for the second time in his legislative career.

Up to a day or two ago, the bill provided for majority nominations in all primaries, but Mr. McConnell and those with whom he advised have decided to eliminate the clause relating to city elections, leaving the present law to govern. This largely for the reason that a law probably will be passed making compulsory the present optional act permitting nonpartisan elections in cities, and the two bills as originally drawn would clash in this particular.

It is still possible that a bill providing for the abolition of the "party circle" at the top of general election ballots, which now permits the voting of "straight tickets" by making a single cross at the top of the party column, will be offered at this session. This proposition does not involve the removal of the party designation, but with the circle out of the way, it would be necessary to make the names of each candidate. The measure is meeting with considerable favor among the more radical progressives and there are powerful advocates of the "reform" ready to support it in a hearing before the elections committee.

Since the publication of the fact that an effort would be made to take away the assistance in marking ballots now given to illiterate voters who are not physically disabled, much informal discussion has been had on the subject among members. Many who at first were opposed to the plan appear to have changed their minds, and the amendment may go through.

JOY-RIDER CHARGES MAN WITH BLACKMAIL

Kennedy, Exponent of "Badger Game" Arrested for Extortion of Money While Masquerading as Detective.

Madison, Jan. 30.—Joseph Kennedy of this city, was arrested by the police today on charges of blackmail preferred by Frank A. Padgett, a Chicago automobilist. Padgett charges he accompanied two women to a boarding house yesterday where he was met by Kennedy and another man who claimed to be detectives. He asserts he was forced to part with a good sum of money to escape arrest by the bogus officers. The police today charge Kennedy with working the "badger" game on several prominent Milwaukee men on previous occasions.

The two women and another man were arrested later in the day. The two women and Mrs. Annie Schelle of Appleton. The police refuse to divulge the name of the other man in the case.

In the course of a speech in the senate today Senator Davis of Ark. incidentally discussed the case of Lorimer, urging the senate to purge its name.

NO DISCORD WAS AT ALL APPARENT

LA FOLLETTE AND McGOVERN WORKING HAND IN HAND NOW.

WEEK'S WORK IS PLANNED

Legislature Will Have Busy Time During the Next Few Days It Is Said.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 30.—Aside from his re-election and significant speech of acceptance, Senator La Follette's visit to Madison last week showed that his relations with Gov. McGovern are of the friendliest character and that all gossip about there being any probability of a split or breach was entirely unfounded. Because Senator La Follette has a high regard for the ability of Congressman L. L. Lenroot of Superior and would like to see him in the United States senate, some one about the capitol, it is declared, conceived an idea that it would necessarily mean a break with Gov. McGovern, also regarded as good senatorial timber.

One of the first places visited by Senator La Follette following his arrival at Madison last Tuesday, was at the governor's office where he and McGovern visited at length. The senator promised the governor he would call on him for various chats during his visit and remained true to his promise. Thursday evening the governor gave a dinner for the senator at the executive residence, and it was apparent at once and every word, a most cordial feeling existed between them. The impression created on observers was that these two leaders believe the progressive republicans intend to devote their energies to the important public work ahead of them.

The recommendations of Gov. McGovern in his message to the legislature that all state agencies dealing with labor questions, such as those handled by the state labor bureau, state board of arbitration and conciliation and proposed industrial insurance commission be placed under one department is about to take form in the legislature in a bill being drawn by Prof. R. C. Conner of the state university. The measure was discussed at a dinner given by Gov. McGovern for Sen. La Follette, and all seemed to agree that the recommendation of the governor should be carried out.

The committees of the legislature will organize this week and get down to business. Three weeks of the session have already passed in the work of legislative organization, re-election of Sen. La Follette and allowing the new members to get settled. Now everything is cleared for heavy work by committees. Hearings for all important bills will be scheduled as early as possible and reports will come in. The committee on education is at work on a bill for the state university. A date for shutting off new bills will be fixed within a few days and members are just now busy preparing their measures and procuring the "O. K." of the revision committee whose duty it is to see that all bills are drafted according to prescribed forms.

Joint hearings on the income tax bill will be held this week. This measure and that on state aid for good funds are certain to precede lively contests before they are passed. The larger majority of members seem to favor both acts, but there is wide difference of opinion on the exact form the bills should take.

The legislature will probably take no action on the investigation committee's reports on the senatorial primary election and the election by the legislature of Sen. Stephenson until after the reports have been printed, which may not be for a week or ten days. The impression prevails that the Husting revolution, or one of similar import, concerning in the senate committee report finding Stephenson guilty of fraud and bribery in securing election and asking a probe by the federal senate, will ultimately be adopted.

Gov. McGovern is expected early this week to go to the senate his appointments of five persons on the state board of control. The governor declares he is not yet fully determined on which persons he will confer the appointments. It is believed that Dr. Alvin Frisby and W. H. Graebner, both of Milwaukee and members of the old board, will be reappointed. A. J. Fountain of Grand Rapids, Rev. Daniel Woodward of Omo and Dr. H. C. Lindley of Chilpewa Falls are believed to have the inside track for the other places. However, A. J. Durlay of Superior, Miss Ellen Evans of the state school for dependent children at Sparta, Prof. A. D. Conover of Madison, one of the present members, and others are being considered. It is understood that Senator La Follette, while in the city, urged the reappointment of Prof. Conover. The salary is $2,500 a year and expenses.

The governor will also appoint four new members of the state board of agriculture and a member of the state board of health to succeed Dr. William F. Whyte of Watertown. It is expected that Dr. Whyte will be reappointed.

Porter Is Missing: Ed. Poolo, colored, employed as porter in the M. J. Brennan barber shop on West Milwaukee street, disappeared on Monday afternoon, January 16, and nothing has been heard of him since. His wife and friends in this city are greatly worried over his absence, as he was a man who had no bad habits and no reason for his departure can be found. It is thought he left here for Chicago. Poolo is thirty-five years old and came here from St. Paul.

It is not strange that Englishmen

BIG CORN FAIR OPEN

EXPOSITION AT COLUMBUS IS LARGEST EVER HELD.

Effort Will Be Made to Make Future Agricultural Shows International in Scope.

Columbus, O., Jan. 30.—An attempt will be made by those interested in the raising of grain in the United States, to interest the promoters of the National Corn exposition, which opened here today and will last until February 11, in a scheme to make the corn exhibitions of the future international affairs. This project is championed by some of the foremost grain experts of the country and has gathered such prestige that it seems assured of a favorable hearing.
The agitation is due to the enormous success met with by annual exhibitions of this American staple and the ever increasing list of grains and grasses that have come to be exhibited with it. When the first show was held in Chicago in 1907, only corn was shown. At the next two annual shows it was found necessary to enlarge the scope by adding classifications for all grains and grasses. Indeed, however, has become so great, because of the extension and broadening out, that not alone all the states, but the government department of agriculture has become directly interested and benefited.

Exhibits from 35 states fill every nook and corner of seven of the largest buildings on the Ohio State exposition grounds. These exhibits, which are in charge of expert demonstrators, deal in a practical way with nearly every phase of the science of agriculture. For instance, North Carolina emphasizes the cotton industry, from the growing plant to the manufactured article, with cotton gin and loom in actual operation; while Illinois especially features its soil work.
The federal department of agriculture is represented with its famous exhibit which fills two large furniture cars, and which has just been returned from the international exposition at Buenos Ayres.

Important among the many meetings, exhibits and other special features may be mentioned the meetings of the American Breeders' association, the Ohio Dairyman's association, the National Rural Life conference, the Ohio Conservation association, the Ohio Corn Improvement association and numerous live stock associations.
Tonight the official opening exercises will be held, including addresses by Governor Harmon, Mayor Marshall of Columbus, President Preitzman and Secretary Bassall of the Columbus chamber of commerce and the chief officials of the exposition.

Vane and city officials, in connection with the award and execution of the 1910 contract for street cleaning in Philadelphia, was called for trial today. It is expected the trial will last a week or more. Vane was awarded the street cleaning contract on his bid to do the work for $1,299,000. Conspiracy and fraud to the extent of $75,000 is alleged in the complaint, and it is the position of the plaintiffs that the contract be declared void, and that Vane be compelled to surrender to the city treasury upwards of half a million dollars already received on his contract in addition to surrendering claim to the remainder.

TO HOLD ALL-DAY MEETINGS

Program Arranged for Includes Discussion of Many Matters of Importance.

Announcements have been made by the Prohibition County committee for a re-organization conference and convention to take place in Janesville next Wednesday, Feb. 1, in Good Temple's hall, 16 South Main street.

Delegates are expected to attend from various parts of the county and a re-organization by precept is to be effected. The speaking attraction of the day will be Quiney Lee, one of the clearest "dry" speakers in the country. Morrow is fresh from the recent National Prohibition congress in session at Chicago, and will probably tell something about what was done at that time.

Another feature of the day's proceedings will be a basket dinner at noon time. Friends are invited to bring their basket lunches and lunch together.

Besides the work of organization, several up-to-date topics will be considered, bearing upon the latest phases of the prohibition movement. Special interest is looked for in the topic, "What is the Middle-of-the-Road Policy?" Marcus Kellogg, county chairman, is in charge of the local arrangements and will preside.

The prohibitionists are having great contests in their ranks between the progressives and the conservatives. A very exciting meeting was held in Chicago of the national committee as well as the prohibition congress.

These elements contested vigorously for the supremacy. The factions are about equally divided and points were won by both sides. Wisconsin has taken the lead in the progressive agitation and its members were very prominent in the contest at the Chicago meetings. One of the plans of the progressives is to insist upon a strict and exclusive attention to party building and are not for cutting out efforts in the way of optional and popular vote plans. They are asking for the nomination for prohibition tickets at all village, town and city elections.

In connection with the above meeting, Rev. Jas. H. Worlandyke of California will speak in the Seventh Day Baptist church at Milton on Monday evening, Jan. 30, and Mr. Morrow will speak in the Free Baptist church at Evansville on Wednesday evening, Feb. 1.

The program for the morning session at 10:30 is as follows:
Song and prayer.
Organization and appointment of committees.
Experience meeting (all participate). "Why I should continue to be a prohibitionist."

Selection of precinct committeemen under plan of primary election law.
Election of county chairman, secretary and treasurer.

The afternoon session begins at 1:30.
Opening exercises.
Discussion of resolutions. (Brief).
2:00 Address by Mr. Morrow.
Music or reading.

3:20 Questioner. What is the Middle-of-the-Road Policy and its Relation to Other Plans and Organizations?
3:30 Booster Plan. What It Means and How to Work It. Open discussion.

READING-LIST FOR THE HOUSE-KEEPER

Books Which May Be Secured At the Public Library Which Will Answer "What To Eat" Problem.

Janesville housekeepers who have trouble in solving the old problem of "What to Have to Eat" perhaps have never thought of the public library as offering any solution. That it may be very helpful in the matter is proven by the list of books which are given below. They include articles on the value and importance of different kinds of food, scientific treatment of the subject of nutrition, hints as to economical selection of foods, as well as recipes and other valuable suggestions in which all housekeepers will be interested. The list:

Atkinson, Science of Nutrition; Saelens, How to Cook for the Sick and Convalescent; Barrows, Principles of Cookery; Black, Eating to Live; Blot, What to Eat and How to Cook It; Boland, Handbook of Invalid Cooking; Burrell, Guiding Principles of Church, Food, Some Account of its Sources and Uses; Ewing, Art of Cookery; Laughlin, Complete Housewife; Lincoln, Boston Cook Book; Low, French Home Cooking; Miller, In the Kitchen; Norton, Food and Dietetics; Owen, Progressive Housekeeping; Owens, Cook Book and Useful Household Hints; Richards, Cost of Living; Taylor, Letters to Young Housekeepers; Langdon, Recipes Just For Two; What One Can Do With a Chaffin-dish; Parlow, Young Housekeeper.

Country subscribers may draw these and other books from the Janesville library with the same conditions as city subscribers, upon the payment of $1.00 annually. The regulation covering this reads as follows: "Country subscribers may draw books from the Public Library upon the payment of an annual subscription of $1.00."

DELINQUENCY SHOWN IN PAYING TAXES

Payments Made To City Treasurer This Year About Three Hundred Behind Those Of 1910.

Taxpayers of Janesville are more delinquent in paying their taxes this year than last, according to City Treasurer James A. Fathers this morning. The payments already made are three hundred behind those of 1910. Today and tomorrow are the last days in which to pay the taxes, a penalty of three per cent being added commencing with the first of February. Up-to-date about twenty six hundred of the three thousand three hundred whose names are on the tax rolls of the city, had made their appearance at the city treasurer's office. It was a very busy day for Mr. Fathers, a line of taxpayers filing in and going out keeping him on the alert every minute of the day up to closing time. Tomorrow will be equally as strenuous, but it is anticipated that there will be several hundred who will pay the penalty, as happens every year, the amount charged being quite small.

The outfit will be fitted to the car back of the driver's seat.

SYMPOSIUM YESTERDAY AT HOWARD'S CHAPEL WAS GREAT SUCCESS

Afternoon Spent in Music and Listening to Good and Instructive Talks by Ladies.

The symposium at Howard's chapel yesterday afternoon was a great success. The opening address was made by Mrs. William Howard, who had for her subject, "The Woman in the Home." This good talk was followed by a few brief but appropriate remarks by Mrs. S. Peterson, on "The Mother and Home in Society." Another carefully prepared paper was read by Mrs. William White, on the "Mother and the Education of the Child." Mrs. C. H. Howard rendered a very pleasing solo, "Gospel Song," accompanied by Mr. Brownson. Much encouragement was given to the Howard chapter by the success of the afternoon and good work in the Spring Brook manufacturing ward is promised.

CHARITY BALL AN EVENT IN SOCIETY

New York Social Set Will Attend Affair in Full Force.—Governor Dix and Staff To Be Guests.

New York, Jan. 29.—In the name of charity society will do its proudest, frocks and dance to its merriest tunes tomorrow night in the grand ballroom suite of the Waldorf-Astoria. For more than half a century the Charity Ball has been one of the leading features of New York's social season, this being indeed the only public affair of the kind in which society takes an active part. Governor Dix and the members of his staff have accepted invitations, and there also will be present many officers of the army and navy. The proceeds of the ball as usual will be devoted to the needs of the Nursery and Child's Hospital, which for over fifty years has been caring for the unfortunate little ones of the city and has depended largely upon the proceeds of the Charity Ball with which to carry on the work.

MEXICAN REBELS CAPTURE A TOWN

Federal Officials of Mexicali
Surrender to Band.

AMERICAN IS IN COMMAND

Revolutionists Shoot Jailer and All
Prisoners Are Freed—Leader Says
Movement Is General Over Entire Republic.

Calexico, Cal., Jan. 30.—A band of one hundred armed revolutionists suddenly appeared at daylight in Mexicali, the town adjoining Calexico, in lower California, Mexico, and immediately proceeded to take possession.

They appeared at the house of Governor Terrazas, sub-prefect of this district, and placed him under arrest. Proceeding in an orderly manner to the customs house, they demanded the surrender of the government's officials. Here the revolutionists met demurrers, but when a window was broken in and the chief of the customs corps was dragged out, they laid down their Winchester and surrendered. All federal officials were placed under guard as the main party proceeded.

Shoot and Kill Jailer.
The revolutionists then went to the jail and demanded the keys of Jailer Jose Villaseor. He refused them and was shot dead with a bullet through his head. The lock on the jail door was then broken off and the inmates found within were all freed, including two revolutionists who had been arrested two days previously. These joined the forces of the insurgents, with cries of "Vive Mexico." The leading stores were visited and the proprietors informed that no looting would be allowed and that as long as their demands were complied with there would be no rioting or killing.

The only killing was that of the jailer. Newspaper correspondents were welcomed by the leader, who allowed photographs to be taken and gave interviews freely.

American Is Commander.
The commander-in-chief of the revolutionary forces is Simon Berthold, an American and a former resident of Los Angeles. J. M. Loyra is his chief lieutenant.

General Berthold said:
"This is a general movement that is taking place all over Mexico. We are a portion of the Mexican Liberal party, which is the same as the Socialist party in the United States. We aim to make Mexico free from the tyranny of Diaz and all the present intolerable officials. We are operating without riot, bloodshed or despoliation. We have ordered all armaments closed and will allow no ill-treatment of women or children and American citizens will be treated with respect."

"We have two hundred armed men in this vicinity and are prepared to fight to a finish to hold the ground we have gained."

"The movement is a result of the imprisonment and persecution of the revolutionists arrested in Los Angeles not long ago. The plans are for the overthrowing of the government and placing the common people on a footing with the higher classes."

Families Flee the Town.
A stack of rifles was placed in the main street and all citizens of Mexicali were invited to take the oath and join. A few did so, including four American lads, who each wore the button of the Industrial Workers of the World.

Many families have moved to this side, not being deterred by the revolutionists.

Rumors are rife that government troops are now on their way to Mexicali. It is said a company of loyalists is being gathered at Algodones, near Yuma, and that they will try to retake the town immediately.

Sheriff Meadows of Imperial county, Cal., has declared martial law, swearing in fifty deputies and allowing no persons to leave the United States.

Mexican government officials declare the uprising merely incidental and that as soon as the revolutionists have all the whiskey and loot in the places of business they will disappear. There will be, however, every effort made to catch the whole party and deal with them under the law.

HOLDS VILLAGE AT BAY

MISSISSIPPIAN, AFTER KILLING
FOE, SEIZES ENTIRE TOWN.

Keeps Inhabitants Indoors Until Arrival of Posse, When He Makes His Escape.

Hamburg, Miss., Jan. 30.—Following a pistol duel in the chair car of a Yazoo and Mississippi Valley train in which A. Heron killed Charles Stewart, the slayer terrorized the passengers until the train reached Hamburg, where he alighted, captured the town and held the inhabitants prisoners in their home for twenty-four hours.

Then he stood off a posse until he could make his escape. A large posse with bloodhounds is searching the country around Hamburg for Heron.

Heron is the proprietor of the local hotel. He and Stewart, who was a flagman on the Yazoo road, had threatened each other's lives. Heron went to McNair and waited until the north-bound train, on which Stewart was running, pulled in. He boarded the train on the front end and walked through the coaches hunting for the flagman. They met in the chair car, in which there were many women and children.

Both drew their weapons and opened fire. At the first shot Stewart wounded Heron slightly. Heron's third shot took effect in Stewart's breast and he fell in the aisle mortally wounded. After Heron had emptied his pistol he drew another and, forcing the passengers to remain quiet, he bandaged his wound.

The run from McNair to Hamburg, which is a flag station, is thirty minutes, and during this time he kept the passengers in terror. He made the conductor give the signal to slow down as the train neared Hamburg, and dropped off.

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 30.—After suffering in great agony for ten days death came as a welcome relief to Lillian Lilford, aged sixteen years, of Ellettsville, who it is alleged, was set fire to by her sweetheart, Lillian Skelton, of Stineville. Soon after the fire the girl's father filed a charge against Skelton and this will now be changed to murder in the first degree. When informed in jail of his sweetheart's death, Skelton broke down and begged to be permitted to attend her funeral which request will be denied.

MORE TROOPS ON U. S. BORDER

Within Ten Days More Soldiers Will Be on Mexico's Frontier Than for Twenty Years.

Fort Sam Houston, Tex., Jan. 30.—The largest concentration of American troops on Mexico's frontier in 20 years will be in effect within ten days. Not only will the six remaining troops of the Third cavalry at Fort Sam Houston be redistributed along the frontier, but two troops of the same cavalry will be sent to the border from Fort Wingate, N. M. Detachments of troops from Fort Clark and Fort Bliss have been ordered to the border patrol duty. There are already four troops of cavalry on the border.

Stanley W. Finch, chief examiner of the department of justice at Washington, is in personal charge of a large force of secret men distributed along the border to prevent smuggling of arms and ammunition into Mexico.

HOPE GEM BRINGS WOE

FAMOUS DIAMOND WILL COST
OWNER $24,200 A YEAR.

Parents of Edward B. McLean Are Much Exercised of His Purchase of Romantic Jewel.

Washington, Jan. 30.—The famous Hope diamond, for which Edward B. McLean paid $300,000, already is losing its brilliancy in the clouds of superstition it has raised in the McLean household.

Mr. McLean's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. McLean, are aroused. His mother is superstitious and she is angry. When told of his purchase she made a hurried trip to the Massachusetts avenue home of her son to deliver a parental lecture on the "absurdity of such a gruesome" purchase.

While the elder McLeans were rushing about reviving the history of the gem, Edward McLean was preparing to get detectives to guard the jewel. To keep the stone will cost him $24,200 a year. It will necessitate five detectives in the McLean home. The items of cost are $15,000 interest on $300,000; $4,500 for personal taxes, and $4,700 for the salaries of the detectives.

From the time Louis XIV. of France imported the gem from the Orient in 1668, it has left a trail of trouble. It descended to Louis XVI. He was beheaded. It passed into the hands of Daniel Eliason, a London jeweler, and mysteriously "shrunk" to 4 1/2 carats. Henry Thomas Hope purchased the stone and became involved in financial troubles and the divorce courts. Abdul Hamid owned the gem and lost the sultanship of Turkey.

MONKEY MADE LOVE TO GIRL

She Boxes His Ears When He Tries to Kiss Her—Simian Bites Her and Lands in Jail.

Paris.—As 20 work girls came out of a dressmaker's shop in the Rue Hottot at midday an arm encircled the waist of one of them.

The girl protested indignantly. The too-gallant intruder was well dressed in a frock coat, gray trousers, top hat, patent leather boots and wore smart gray suede gloves. But he was a hideous little person.

The girls began making fun of him, when suddenly he caught hold of one and put his face close to hers. She boxed his ears, and he dropped on all fours and bit her leg.

There was a panic. The girls rushed off shrieking, and two policemen arrested the aggressor. The creature was a chimpanzee—the pet of an explorer living near at hand. He was captured after a struggle, and carried off by his master's cook, who went to fetch him at the police station, where he had spent the night.

An amusing item of the story is that the police magistrate got very angry with the monkey when he was first brought in because he refused to answer any questions and turned his back on the official table.

Know Little of Corn's Value

The use of Indian corn as a food product is very limited in the United Kingdom, and there are reasons for it other than the absence of taste. Apparently the British public is not properly enlightened as to the various ways of preparing timrod corn, corn meal and hominy. It would seem that little is known of the vegetable itself, as recipes in some English cookbooks make very meager reference to its preparation.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

NOT long ago I went to call on a friend of mine, an old lady who is blessed with that most wonderful of household possessions—an old-fashioned attic. A really old-fashioned one, mysterious, filled with vague memories and vaguer suggestions of years long since gone by. Shall I tell you how I spent that afternoon?

My little old friend took me up to the attic—"garret," she quaintly named it—to show me what she called her "treasure trunk."

She is the mother of a large family of girls and boys who have long since flown away from the old home nest.

This attic is a large, long, dark room with a pleasant smell of old lavender and dried flowers pervading it. Old clothes hang ghostlike along the walls and queer old furniture crams every nook and corner.

The treasure trunk was near the window and I noticed, when my friend pulled it out from the wall, that it was entirely free from dust and had the appearance of having been opened frequently.

The treasure trunk wasn't anything as magnificent as the name might suggest but a most modest little affair covered with black leather and studded with brass nails. It looked like a very poor and humble country relative of the grand and complicated affairs that department stores sell nowadays, but my friend handled it as lovingly as if the ugly little thing were made of gold.

It was a queer collection of "treasures" that met my eye when the lid was lifted, and yet just such a collection as I suppose mothers have made from time immemorial.

A little old rag doll with features long since worn away by the vigorous washing of some baby girl; a toy drum—very tender fingers lifted this little object from the trunk, for the toy drum, like the little toy dog and the little tin soldier, was laid aside by a little boy Blue who toddled off to his trundle bed—

"To dream of the pretty toys
And as he was dreaming an angel song
Awakened the little boy Blue.
Oh, the years they are many, the years they are long,
But the little toy friends are true."

A baby dress, yellow with age, and a baby's shoe, worn and shabby, completed the treasures in the till of the trunk.

And then farther down were the mementoes of the school-days of her children, a broken slate, a tattered book or two, a roll of papers scrawled over with strangely childish figures, report cards and a funny little old-fashioned cap—its brilliant red faded and dimmed.

"This trunk is my most wonderful possession," she said. "I think if the house were fire I should try to save this first."

And I believed her.

"When I get lonely for my children, I come up here and look at these things my babies played with long ago and then I feel rich and comforted beyond all words to say. I should be poor indeed without this little trunk to help me summon back my babies."

A treasure trunk isn't such a bad possession to have, is it?

NO

NO WOMAN can be handsome by force of features alone, any more than she can be witty only by help of speech.

Omelets.

The making of a successful omelet means skill with the best of materials. Almost any left-over may be used advantageously in an omelet.

Vegetables may be used in the sauce to serve with an omelet or they may be spread on half the mixture before folding.

Sweet omelets are delicious. Add a teaspoonful of powdered sugar to the eggs and spread the jam, jelly or preserves thinly over the omelet before folding.

With juicy fruits the juice is poured over the omelet just as it is served.

Lemon Omelet.—Put the yolks of four eggs into a bowl with a tablespoonful of sugar, beat until light and add the grated rind of a lemon. Whip the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth and mix lightly with the yolks. Then stir in a fourth of a teaspoonful of baking powder. Pour in the omelet pan, in which a tablespoonful of butter has been melted, and cook carefully until done. Cut in half and put together with the following sauce:

Take half a cup of sugar, a tablespoonful of butter, the juice and rind of a lemon, two well-beaten eggs; beat together and stir over the fire until thick.

Friars' Omelet.—Cook a dozen apples as for apple sauce, sweeten to taste and add a tablespoonful of butter. When cold stir in four well-beaten eggs and turn into a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle bread crumbs over the top and bake in a moderate oven.

Peach Omelet.—Dice three or four peaches, cover with sugar and stand aside. Make an omelet with six eggs, a pinch of salt and six tablespoonfuls of the peach juice. Serve the omelet with the peaches and drizzle of the juice with sugar, all hot.

Omelet With Oyster Sauce.—Serve a plain omelet with a rich white sauce and half a cup of oysters that have been cooked until the edges curled, in their own liquor. Chop the oysters.

PRETTY AT HOME FROCK.

For afternoons at home we show a clever design for a gown to be made of some soft, supple material. In this instance it is Nattier blue marquisette over self-tone satin. The corseage is in draped flou style, over a chemise and stock of all-over lace corresponding to sleeves. Chiffon velvet a shade darker than the marquisette outlines the flou, forms cuffs on sleeves and borders the shaded tulle on skirt. The tunic is joined near bottom with a large jet ornament.

FOR THE TINY WOMAN.

A new coat suit shown last week seems to have been created for the small woman. The coat is single-breasted and of the length shown above, fits rather closely, and has bands of fancy braid trimming around neck and down fronts. Accompanying this chic costume was a rather small fur turban, devoid of trimming save a modest bunch of algettes on left side, near front.

HOW TO MAKE PEANUT BUTTER.

Peanut butter is made from peanuts roasted and ground, with salt added. A much better butter is, however, made from nuts blanched only by raising the temperature to 150 degrees in a gas stove and leaving two hours. The skins can be easily removed, and then grinding in a peanut mill. This can be eaten with bread instead of dairy butter, and care should be taken not to overeat, for it is very nutritious, the most concentrated of all foods, according to the bulletin issued by the department of agriculture on the culture of the peanut crop.

MODERN AFTERNOON DRESS.

For the rural brides, afternoon dress, a dress of this sort is ideal and almost essential to every woman's wardrobe. Black pin-striped gowns, in a rich shade of dark green, was used for the model from which our sketch was taken, and it makes a most becoming and serviceable gown. The design is very good, especially of the bodice, where the creases are cleverly used in bands which outline the yoke and stock of all-over lace, which are veiled with black chiffon. Jet motifs are used on bodice and skirt in effective fashion, and add much to the beauty of the dress. The deep hem is black satin, above which are three folds of the striped poplin.

VOICES OF THE BABIES.

There is a truth in this bit of philosophy picked up by the roadside: "The nice marches forward on the feet of little children."

Have you ever taken time to consider that whatever the future character of the race may be depends exactly upon the type of little children produced and trained today?

If the race in the future is to be physically big and strong, if it is to be artistically and intellectually supreme, you must do your duty today towards the children who are growing up around you. There must be no better shelter methods of training and there must be no guess work in their care.

The ideals you inspire in them now will be the ideals they will project into the world at some future time. If they are to have force of character and mental poise in the days to come, you must lay the groundwork now.

Children must not be regarded in the home as nuisances, but rather as God's greatest gifts to men and women. The woman who shuns motherhood and who rails against her fate when it is thrust upon her some day, is likely to cry out in bitterness for the very children she denied herself.

The woman who remains single because she doesn't want the responsibility of motherhood some day is likely to find herself haunted by the ghosts of the babies she never had, and places the call of motherhood in the heart of every woman and sooner or later it becomes the supreme call of her life. She may heed it only when the sunset rays of life fall across her path, but when she does finally listen, she knows that whatever she has gained in the world has been paid for by forfeiting the most precious gift of all, and could she make over her life, she would gladly surrender all she has gained to feel childish arms around her neck, or a childish head on her breast, or to hear a childish trouble in her ear, and as she sits in the midst of her regrets, she hears from out of the Somewhere the voices of ghostly babies calling to her.

She knows, though she may never acknowledge it, that she has missed the real sweetness of life. No matter how big the place she may have gained, she knows it is insignificant beside that of the woman who has had that which she has denied herself. The mother love is there, buried in her nature, and it won't be denied its hearing.

Yet the woman who carelessly rears her children commits as great a folly, for in later years she sees and understands just why failures in their lives have come about and she knows, too, that only for her errant nature, things might have been different.

In this age of ours we are talking about producing THE Great Race of the future, but this can never come about until men choose their wives with the idea that they are to be the mothers of their children and not the playthings of their native years and until women choose husbands as the prospective fathers of their prospective children, and not as money makers who shall give them the material comforts of the world. There is nothing bold in such a proposition. It is both good ethics and good morals and the only code whereby the fine and accurate adjustments of family life may be maintained.

Katherine Kip

Ancient and Modern Day.

We shall hear much in the coming years about the superiority of the Greek attitude to life, and that in those days men could think straight about morals. And we shall hold the essence of that superiority, and understand all that we hear, by remembering this—that if you told a hardy Greek boy that a person was virtuous, or an act was good, he would be attracted to that person or that act, but the same modern boy would be repelled.—Max Eastman, in the Atlantic.

CHRIST, SAVIOR OF ALL PEOPLE

INTERESTING SERMON ON "UNIVERSAL CHRIST" AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH BY

THE REV. J. W. LAUGHLIN, D. D.

Tells of the Application of the Teachings of Jesus to All Ages

"The Universal Christ" was the subject of an excellent sermon by the Rev. J. W. Laughlin of the First Presbyterian church, yesterday morning. He chose for his text, Acts, 10th chapter, 34th verse; Colossians, 3rd chapter, 31st verse; and Revelations, 7th chapter, 10th verse.

"Whatever notion," said Mr. Laughlin, "was prevalent among the Jews as to their being the chosen race and the one to whom Christ came in particular, before His coming, was soon changed after He came. It was soon learned that all the nations were the chosen ones and all races were the royal priesthood in so far as they accepted Christ. Upon His coming it was realized that He was a Universal Saviour."

"It took a long time for the Jews as a race to realize that the Lord was universal and not for them alone. When Nicodemus asked concerning the matter, Christ told him that 'God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him, should not perish, but should have everlasting life.' He said the 'world' and 'whoever,' thus showing that he did not mean any particular people, but that the Lord was to bring salvation to everybody. Paul was the first to grasp this universal idea and when he and Barnabas started out to spread the gospel to other people beside the Jews, they were called back and asked what right they had to preach of a Universal Kingdom. Before they were allowed to go forth and spread His teachings, a conference was held of all the disciples and this was the first of the first church conference.

"Christianity had its roots in Judea but it is universal. The Greeks contributed their art and flexibility of language and the Romans gave organization and each of these contributions helped to make it world-wide. It has taken the best there is in the world and adapted itself to it. A good illustration of the universality of Christianity even in its early stages, was the fact that the cross bore inscriptions in Hebrew, Greek and Latin.

"Christ is as much a Saviour of the Chinese and the African as He is of the American and the European. By looking at their portraits, you could tell at a glance that Moses was a Jew and that Napoleon was a Frenchman, but Christ reveals no race. He did not belong to any one people but was for all people. He is the Universal Saviour. The man is down and out and the heathen Hindoo have equal chances of being saved and those two instances are 1900 years after He came and was thought to be the Saviour of one race.

"We are living in absolutely a new world today. The larger part of our theology and knowledge has come to us within the last one hundred years, and the fact that the teachings of Jesus are accepted today in the face of these new teachings, shows that Christ is universal and for all ages. In the olden days men thought out theories and made their facts fit these but today we find facts and then shape our theories, and men who hold to the old theories are behind the procession. But Christ has not suffered and still remains the world-wide Saviour. This is because His principles are applicable to present day industrial conditions. Today is the day of changes in the manufacturing world and instead of one man doing the work of fifty, fifty men do one thing. It is the age of allied industries and yet the teachings of Christ are applicable to the conditions of today. Jesus Christ is the Universal Man and is the pattern for all men. He was never a father and still every father knows when he is a perfect father. He was never a husband and still every husband knows when he is a perfect husband. Every man follows Christ for He is the leader and inspirer of all men. In short, Christ adapts Himself to life conditions of every age and race, for He is the Universal Saviour."

JANESVILLE WON THE SERVICES OF NURSE

Columbus Wins Big Prize—Evanston Won Drinking Fountain.

Rock county made a good showing in the recent contest between cities and villages in the state which competed for the prizes offered by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association. In the recent sale of the Red Cross Christmas seals, Janesville secured the services of a trained nurse during the month of November, next, having an average sale of 2,316 per capita. Evanston was first in the list of cities in the first district to secure a fifty dollar drinking fountain, having a per capita sale being 6,235. Kenosha was second with 5,951. Elkhorn was third with 4,225.

Columbus was leader in the 1910 seal campaign in the state, making a per capita sale of 25,333 seals and winning the $360 piano given to the city of more than 2,000 population making the greatest per capita sale.

Rhinelander Center, with a sale of 19,242, was second. Kenosha won the upper high school offered to cities of 15,000 or more population with a per capita sale of 5,951. Madison being second with 4,888 and Eau Claire third with 4,331.

Announcement of these prize awards was made by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association. Several cities failed to get their returns into the Milwaukee office by six o'clock on Jan. 11th, as provided in the contest rules.

AT THE PLAY HOUSES

When Messrs. Gregory and Stegner determined to exploit Wm. H. Turner as the star of "Father and the Boys" they cast about for a suitable leading lady to play "Doris Thurston" their choice finally falling on Edith Younger. When Miss Younger first looked over the manuscript she found that this character was a little, Montana, prodigy, who, as a child, had received a "blue chip" every time she went to "Sunday School." Furthermore, she discovered that the child, grown to womanhood, had gone on the stage as a leading lady in a play which was "Never allowed this side of the Missouri." The heroing was most discovered doing "stunts in New York drawing room, landing out stunts" which she would not have dared produce in a real show without the protection of a net. All of this, garbled with George Ade's choicest slang, appeared tremendously to Miss Younger as result she has made in "Father and the Boys" a hit which fully deserves to be written down emphatically. "Father and the Boys" will be presented at Myers Theatre, Saturday, February 3, matinee and evening.

The banner musical comedy of the season, "The Sweetest Girl in Paris," after returning to Milwaukee, where it got its first start in life, will come direct to the Myers Opera House on Friday, February 10.

Appreciative of the favorable reception which "The Sweetest Girl in Paris" met with in Milwaukee last August, during the week of trial performances before the opening at the LaSalle Opera House of Chicago, manager Harry Askin has selected the Cream City for the starting point of an extended tour of the Middle West. At the former engagement, it was a raw piece, in its formative condition, yet Milwaukee applauded it heartily and gave it a week of thriving business. Now it is in the pink of condition, after a run of five months—a record-breaker for the current season—in Chicago, and is vastly improved in every particular.

Milwaukee will see no second touring company on this visit the original organization will be sent out from behind women to the smallest girl. This without precedent in the history of LaSalle productions, but it is a principle which Mr. Askin intends to cling to, not only in relation to "The Sweetest Girl" but to all its successors at the LaSalle as well. They will go to other cities with exactly the same players that participated in the original run at the home theatre.

The picturesque amusing fable of Cobosco, the grand opera tenor with the cracked "pipes," the pretty American music student in Paris, and the smart American "sponser," is perhaps the best known to most people. The musical numbers and dances which furnished the tale have been elaborated during the Chicago run, and in preparation for the road tour the original piece has been placed in the hands of a brilliant student director, Mr. Frank Smithson. A new setting has also been built for the second act.

By actual count the company will number 68 people, and this is the largest organization that has ever gone on tour out of Chicago since the days of Henderson's extravaganza, twenty years ago. The principals of the "all-star" cast include: Trilby Frizzan, Alexander Carr, Frederick V. Bowers, Dorothy Brenner, Sue Bennett and Cathryn Howe Palmer.

Sitting in a dingy steamship waiting room, with girlfriends, peasants and haughty Parisian dames passing, or lounging about, Charles Klein, while waiting for a steamer at Marseilles, France, received the inspiration for the latest dramatic product, "The Third Degree." Mr. Klein, with his wife, had just completed a tour of provincial Britain and France and was bound for Cairo, Egypt. Upon their arrival, as is Mr. Klein's custom, he visited the offices of the American Consul at Marseilles, and requested him to forward such mail as arrived to Cairo, and with his pretty little wife boarded the steamer "Berghia" and the "Lloyd Brasileiro" quay.

As the gang plank was being hoisted a messenger came running down the pier shouting for "Mons. Klein." Mr. Klein, a perfect linguist, answered the call, and the messenger, from the Consul's office, tossed him a parcel of mail and several newly arrived American papers just in from Charleston. The steamer was well out to sea when Mr. Klein spread the papers out in the smoking saloon and began reading the telegraphic matter. "Wrong Man Executed For Crime" read one headline, "Gaily Man Confesses on His Death Bed" it continued, and this particularly attracted Mr. Klein's attention. Calling his wife, he outlined a drama to her, with the plot hanging about a young man wrongfully accused, forced to confess through extortion, or sweating, as one of the severe processes of the third degree is termed. Mrs. Klein, who is always the censor of Mr. Klein's inspirations, approved the idea and when the famous dramatic writer had his hotel, "The Shepherd" at Cairo, his mental notes had been transferred into the scenario of what has since proven to be the

ANXIOUS REGARDING FORM OF NEW LAWS

Legislature Expected to Pass the Initiative and Referendum Measure This Session.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 30.—The adoption of initiative and referendum legislation by this legislature being a foregone conclusion, interest has now centered in the form which the actions may be for the proposed amendment. This phase of the subject, together with the devices which outside interests are expected to employ to thwart the popular will, was the subject of three speeches Saturday afternoon before the Saturday Lunch club, over which Gov. McGovern presided and Senator La Follette was an interested listener. To the objection of foes of the referendum that the people demand a law whose phraseology and structure itself are easily understood, George Judson King, the chief speaker, replied that in Oregon, where the system is having a noteworthy trial, the people upon a referendum vote ruled solidly against a $125,000 appropriation for military armories and voted as plainly in favor of an educational bill. The standard of popular intelligence upon proposed legislation would average about 75 per cent, showing, he said, that the people can see through the legal verbiage and understand what they want.

Prof. Edward A. Ross of the University of Wisconsin, introduced by Gov. McGovern, as one of the country's greatest sociologists, said that a century ago socialism was not so complex and demanded no such safeguards as are needed today. Since then, he said, there has been a gradual wrenching of the machinery of government from the people, and every decade has witnessed an increased amount of strain to which our governments are subjected.

"Every year the phalanx of parties who have been interested in swerving the government from its original purpose is getting longer," he said. "It is necessary to move the center of power nearer the people."

Prof. Ross said that when a measure is framed by outside interests and put before the people for a referendum vote, its provisions should be widely published and explained so that the people may understand its full import and avoid being bamboozled in the slightest particular. He said there should be schools of citizenship, literally, by the employment of evening classes and other agencies.

Herbert Quick, noted journalist, who spoke next, said the danger lies not in the lack of progress in the making of an adequate referendum amendment, but rather in the rapidity of progress to that end.

"The danger is in ignorance," he said, "and the greatest danger lies in the ignorance of the upper classes."

He said the effectiveness of the Australian ballot was killed by those who, in its making, thought they were his friends. By providing a square at the top of a party column, he asserted, they purposed to compel straight ticket voting. The result, he intimated, has been to destroy independence in voting. In the same way the commission form of city government has been hedged about with restrictions intended to safeguard popular rights but which instead are safeguards of the people's will. He intimated recent criticisms of the commission form in La Crosse and Madison based on this tendency. When the law was passed the initiative, referendum and recall were left out, and into it was put a provision that each commissioner should succeed the other every three years, "according to the hallowed precedent of the United States senate." He was glad to note that an earnest effort is now being made to incorporate the initiative and referendum feature in the commission law.

AWNING ADMITS BREEZE

Canopy Can Be Moved Around on Frames to Follow Sun.

One objection to awnings is that they exclude a certain amount of air and there are another danger of people venting all the air there is. A Milwaukee genius has overcome this objection by designing an awning which in addition to keeping out the sun, lets in the breeze. This is accomplished by having the canopy made to cover only half of the window. It is tacked at top and bottom to slide from side to side of the frames. These frames are hinged, the lower one much more so

KEEPER SUN OUT; LETS BREEZE IN.

Then the upper, thus giving the shade the customary outward swing. With this awning the sun can be followed in its course around the house by moving the shade in its path. This will effectively keep the sunlight out of the room while they will always be space enough around the shade to admit any air that may be stirring. This awning, however, does not afford the same protection from rain that the other type does.

STAFFORD MAKING GOOD IN THE RING

Former Resident, Now at St. Louis, Has Won and Lost Bout to Terry McGovern's Brother.

Friends of Eddie Stafford, formerly of this city, who took up the prize fighting game, will be interested to learn of the outcome of two battles in which he took part in St. Louis recently. Stafford is making good and is touted as a comer. On Saturday, Jan. 14, before the Columbian Athletic club at St. Louis, he defeated Ben McGovern, a brother of Terry McGovern, in a six-round bout. A week later, in a three round go, McGovern got the decision. Stafford is now trying to secure another six round match with "Young" McGovern.

Stafford is quite well known in this city where he lived for several years. He worked here as a barber for Frank Mesquite. His wife is a daughter of Mrs. Nettie Pierce of this city.

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation
Novel

By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

She rose. "I can't stand this air and these flies any longer. They're too disgusting."

He followed her into the other house, conscious of the dismay and bitterness which burst forth in the instant they were alone. "What am I to do? She is my mother, but I've lost all sense of relationship to her. And these people, except you and Mr. Redfield, are all disgusting to me. It isn't because my mother is poor, it isn't because she's keeping boarders; it's something else. At this point her voice failed her.

"I CAN'T STAND THIS AIR AND THESE FLIES ANY LONGER."

"Let us go out into the air," suggested the ranger presently. "The mountain wind will do you good."

She followed him trustfully, and as she stepped from the equator of the hotel into the splendor of the morning her head lifted. She drank the clear, crisp wind as one takes water in the desert.

"The air is clean, anyway," she said. Cavanagh to divert her pointed away to the mountains. "There is my domain. Up there I am sole ruler. No one can litter the earth with corruption or poison the streams."

She did not speak, but as she studied the ranger her face cleared. "It is beautiful up there."

He went on. "I hate all this scrap heap quite as heartily as you do, but up there are sweetness and sanity. The streams are germless, and the forest cannot be domesticated. That is why I am a ranger. I could not endure life in a town like this."

He turned up the street toward the high hill to the south, and she kept step with him. As she did not speak, he asked, "What did you expect to do out here?"

"I hoped to teach," she replied, her voice still choked with her emotion. "I expected to find the country much improved."

"And so it is, but it is still a long way from an eastern state. Perhaps you will find the people less savage than they appear at first glance."

"It isn't the town or the people; it is my mother!" she burst forth again. "Tell me! A woman in the car yesterday accused my mother of selling whisky unlawfully. Is this so? Tell me!"

She faced him resolutely, and, perceiving that she could not be evaded, he made slow answer. "I don't know that she does, but I've heard it charged against her."

"Who made the charge?"

"One of the clergymen, and then it's common talk among the rough men of the town."

"But she's my mother!" wailed the girl, coming back to the central fact. "She has sent me money—she has been kind to me. What am I to do? She needs me, and yet the thought of staying here and facing her life frightens me."

The rotten board walks, the low rockeries, the unshaven, bear-eyed men sitting on the thresholds of the saloons, the slattern squaws wandering abroad like bedraggled hens, made the girl stare with wonder and dismay. She had remembered the town street as a highway filled with splendid cavaliers, a list wherein heroic deeds were done with horse and pistol.

She perceived in the ranger the man of the new order, and with this in her mind she said: "You don't belong here? You're not a western man?"

"Not in the sense of having been born here," he replied. "I am, in fact, a native of England, though I've lived nearly twenty years of my life in the States."

She glanced at his badge. "How did you come to be a ranger—what does it mean? It's all new to me."

"It is new to the west," he answered smilingly, glad of a chance to turn her thought from her own personal griefs. "It has all come about since you went east. Uncle Sam has at last become provident and is now conserving his resources. I am one of his representatives, with stewardship over some 60,000 acres of territory, mostly forest."

She looked at him with eyes of changing light. "You don't talk like an Englishman, and yet you are not like the men out here."

"I shouldn't care to be like some of them," he answered. "My being here is quite logical. I went into the cattle business like many another, and I went broke. I served under Colonel Roosevelt in the Cuban war and after my term was out naturally drifted back. I love the wilderness and have some natural taste for forestry, and I can ride and pack a horse as well as most cowboys; hence my uniform. I'm not the best forest ranger in the service, I'll admit, but I fancy I'm a fair average."

"And that is your badge—the pine tree?"

"Yes, and I am proud of it. Some of the fellows are not, but so far as I am concerned I am glad to be known as a defender of the forest. A tree means much to me. I never mark one for felling without a sense of responsibility to the future."

Her questions came slowly, like those of a child. "Where do you live?"

"Directly up the South Fork about twenty miles."

"What do you do?"

"He smiled. "Not much. I ride the trails, guard the game, put out fires, scale lumber, burn brush, build bridges, herd cattle, count sheep, survey land and a few other odd chores. It's supposed to be a soft snap, but I can't see it that way."

"Do you live alone?"

"Yes, for the larger part of the time. I have an assistant, who is with me during part of the summer months. Mostly I am alone. However, I am supposed to keep open house, and I catch a visitor now and then."

"Do you expect to do this always?"

He smiled again. "There you touch my secret spring. I have the hope of being chief forester some time—I mean we all have the prospect of promotion to sustain us. The service is so new that any one with even a knowledge of forestry is in demand. By and by real foresters will arise."

She returned abruptly to her own problem. "I dread to go back to my mother, but I must. Oh, how I hate that hotel! I loathe the flies, the smells, the people that eat there, the waiters—everything!" She shuddered.

"Many of the evils you mention could be reformed, except, of course, some of the people who come to eat. I fear several of them have gone beyond reformation."

As they started back down the street she saw the motor stage just leaving the door of the office. "That settles one question," she said. "I can't get away till tomorrow."

"Where would you go if you broke camp—back to the east?"

"No. My mother thinks there is a place for me in Sulphur City."

"Your case interests me deeply. I wish I could advise you to stay, but this is a rough town for a girl like you. Why don't you talk the problem over with the supervisor?" His voice became firmer. "Mrs. Redfield is the very one to help you."

"Where does she live?"

"Their ranch lies just above Sulphur, at the mouth of the canyon. May I tell him what you've told me? He's a good sort, is Redfield—much better able to advise than I am."

Cavanagh found himself enjoying the confidence of this girl so strangely thrown into his care, and the curious comment of the people in the street did not disturb him except as it bore upon his companion's position in the town.

At the door of the hotel some half a dozen men were clustered. As the young couple approached they gave way, but a short, powerful man, whom Leo Virginia recognized as Gregg, the sheepman, called to the ranger.

"I want to see you before you leave town, Mr. Ranger."

"Very well. I shall be here all the forenoon," answered Cavanagh in the tone of a man accepting a challenge. Then, turning to the girl, he said earnestly: "I want to help you. I shall be here for lunch, and meanwhile I wish you would take Redfield into your confidence. He's a wise old boy, and everybody knows him. No one doubts his motives. Besides, he has a family and is rich and unhurried. Would you like me to talk with him?"

"If you will. I want to do right. Indeed, I do."

"I'm sure of that," he said, with eyes upon her flushed and quivering face. "There's a way out, believe me."

CHAPTER III.

LIZZ AND HER DAUGHTER.

THEY parted on the little porch of the hotel, and her eyes followed his upright figure till he entered one of the shops. He had precisely the look and bearing of a young lieutenant in the regular army. She returned to her own room strangely heartened by her talk with the ranger.

She was still pondering when her mother came in.

"How'd you sleep last night?"

Leo Virginia could not bring herself to lie. "Not very well," she admitted.

"Neither did I. Fact of the matter is your coming fairly upset me. I've been kind of used up for three months. I don't know what ails me. I'd ought to go up to Sulphur to see a doctor, but there don't seem to be any free time. I hear to have lost my grip. Food don't give me any strength. I saw you talking with Ross Cavanagh. There's a man, and Reddy—Reddy is what you call a fancy rancher; goes in for alfalfa and fruit and all that. He isn't in the forest service for the pay or for graft. He's got a regular palace up there above Sulphur—hot and cold water all through the house, a furnace in the cellar and two bathrooms, so they tell me; I never was in the place. You better keep out of the café. It ain't a fit place for you. Fact is, I wasn't expecting anything so fine as you are. I laid awake all night last night figuring on what to do. I reckon you'd better go back and give this outfit up as a bad job. I used to tell Ed you didn't belong to neither of us, and you don't. I can't see where you did come from—anyhow, I don't want the responsibility of having you here. Why, you'll have half the men in the county hatching to my corral. You're too good for any of them. You just plan to pack up and pull out tomorrow."

She went out with a dragging step that softened the girl's heart. Lizz's daughter came nearer to loving her at this moment than at any time since her fifth year.

In truth, Lizz had risen that morning intending to whirl in and clean up the house, being suddenly conscious to some degree of the dirt and disorder around her, but she found herself physically unequal to the task. Her brain seemed misty, and her food had been a source of keen pain to her.

She gave sharp answers to all the men who came up to ask after her daughter, and to one who remarked on the girl's good looks and demanded an introduction she said: "Get along! You fellows want to understand I'll kill the man that sets out to fool with my girl. I tell you that!"

While yet Leo Virginia was wondering how to begin the day's work some one knocked on her door, and in answer to her invitation a woman stepped in—a thin blond hag with a weak smile and watery blue eyes. "Is this little Leo Virginia?" she asked.

"The girl rose. "Yes."

"Well, howdy?" She extended her hand, and Lizz took it. "My name's Jackson—Mrs. Orlando Jackson. I knew you'd be up and you before the war. Are you back for to stay?"

"No, I don't think so. Will you sit down?"

Mrs. Jackson took a seat. "Come back to see how you're doing, I reckon. Found her pretty poorly, didn't you?" She lowered her voice. "I think she's got cancer of the stomach—now that's my guess."

Virginia started. "What makes you think so?"

"Well, I knew a woman who went just that way. Had that same flabby, funny look—and that same distress after eatin'. I told her this morning she'd better go up to Sulphur and see that new doctor."

"What did you mean by 'the war'?" asked Virginia.

"Why, you remember the rustler war? We done everything out here from that year. You was here, for I saw you."

"Oh!" exclaimed Virginia. "I understand now. Yes, I was here. I saw my father at the head of the cowboys."

"They weren't cowboys. They were hired killers from Texas. That's what led you to put out of the state. He was on the wrong side, and if it hadn't been for the regular soldiers he'd 'a' been wiped out right here. As it was he had to skip the range and hadn't never been back. I don't suppose folks will lay it up again you—help a girl—but they couldn't no son of Ed Wetherford come back here and settle, not for a minute. Why, you ma has had to bluff the whole county 'most—not that I lay anything up again her. I tell folks she was that bewitched with Ed she couldn't see things any way but his way. He fought to save his ranch and stawk, but she couldn't do nothing—and then to have him go back on her the way he did—slop out 'twixt two days and never write; that just about shot her to pieces. I never could understand that in Ed; he 'peared so mortal fond of you and of her too. He sure was fond of you." She shook her head. "No, can't nobody make me believe Ed Wetherford is alive."

Leo Virginia started. "Who says he's alive?"

"Now, don't get excited, girl. He ain't alive, but yet folks say we don't know he's dead. He jest dropped out so far as you ma is concerned and so far as the county is concerned, but some thought you was with him in the east."

The girl was now aware that her visitor was hoping to gain some further information and so curtly answered: "I've never seen my father since that night the soldiers came and took him away to the fort. And my mother told me he died down in Texas."

Daily Science Talk

President Department of Astronomy,
Brooklyn College of Arts and Sciences.

VAGARIES OF THE MOON.

Of all the heavenly bodies the moon seems the most lawless. In the exact middle of an avenue ten degrees wide the sun makes his yearly circuit about the heavens. Twenty moons could march abreast within the limits of that thoroughfare, but we have only one moon, and that goes staggering about from one side to the other.

This, however, is due to the fact that the moon's orbit is inclined to that of the earth by an angle of five degrees. Hence, inasmuch as the moon encircles the heavens every month, it may be found five degrees north of the highest ever reached by the sun in summer and five degrees south of the lowest ever reached by the sun in winter.

That is, the moon's range is ten degrees greater than that of the sun.

Now, the avenue in whose center the sun seems to travel is itself a winding way, so that in summer the sun is found twenty-three and one-half degrees north of the celestial equator and in winter twenty-three and one-half degrees south thereof. This makes a range of forty-seven degrees north and south for the sun and of fifty-seven degrees for the moon. A high new moon in summer would be fifty-seven degrees higher than a low new moon in winter. This lacks only three degrees of being one-third of the sweep from horizon to horizon. Measured on a single meridian it would equal a line of 114 full moons. We thus have explained the mystery of the moon being sometimes found so high and sometimes so low.

Note these things every month: (1) The moon reaches each month a highest and a lowest, where it is five degrees distant from the sun's path; (2) the moon has each month an ascending and a descending node, these being the points where it crosses the sun's path northward and southward; (3) the moon has each month a perigee and an apogee, points nearest to and farthest from the earth, varying from about 229,000 miles to 253,000 miles; this is because of the elliptical path, with the earth at one focus, but not at the center; (4) the moon has each month its greatest libration east and greatest libration west, an apparent east and west swing, whereby we are enabled to see four-sevenths of its surface.

DESTINY BY SCIENTIFIC MEANS

Measurements Will Show What Career You Are Most Sued For—Instruments Not New.

Pittsburg.—The general system of mental and physical diagnosis of Dr. Watson L. Savage, head of the department of health of the Carnegie Technical Institute, is destined to revolutionize educational methods. Dr. Savage believes, also, he is sure it will better the health and increase personal effectiveness in all walks of life when it is generally practiced.

Dr. Savage means to size up a student by measuring him with fine instruments from head to toes. A certain type of mouth and throat, charted after infinitesimally fine measurements, may show that the student should become a clergyman. Taken in connection with other measurements of head and internal organs they will promise a career for him as a ward politician.

Measurements will show whether the student should bend his efforts on learning to be a farmer or lawyer, physician or a civil engineer or a banker; whether in play hours he should play ball or billiards.

The old method of sounding a man's chest to ascertain if he has a good purr of lungs, thrusting the fingers in the side to see if one's liver is all right, listening to the heart and other stereotyped forms of ascertaining a man's condition, he says, are back numbers. Measurements are the thing and he proposes to show that instruments will verify his opinion. And the instruments which he will use are not new to the scientific world.

Dr. Savage in one examination proposes to tell the student just what he should do—not so much what he should do, he says, there is just as much difference in the appearance of the human face as there is in the human face. As for diet, what might be the ruin of one man would be just the thing for another.

A Double Holiday.

"If two heads are better than one, ought not this coming one, too, be a very wise one?"

"How so?"

"Isn't it coming with two heads?"
